Filipinos vote on constitution

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Filipinos cast ballots Monday to approve or disapprove a new constitution. The voting was seen as a crucial test of strength for President Corazon Aquino's 11-month-old administration.

Small explosions within 20 minutes occurred at three locations in Manila the night before the plebiscite, but no one was injured, private radio station DZRH said.

The explosions, apparently from homemade bombs, were at the San Roque Roman Catholic Church, a bookstore and in a vacant lot about 200 yards from the DZRH studios, according to the broadcast. Police said they had no suspects.

Also Sunday night, Manila police arrested two men and seized 120 sticks of dynamite after learning of a plot to disrupt the voting.

The military put 79 battalions on alert to prevent trouble during the nationwide voting, which came days after the government put down a military coup attempt by supporters of former President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Polls were open from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. (6 p.m. Sunday to 1a.m. Monday EST). Nationwide results were not expected for days, but the private National Movement for Free Elections said it expected definitive results from the Manila area by midnight (11 a.m. Monday EST).

Ramon Felipe Jr., chairman of the Commission on Elections, predicted an 80 percent turnout of the 25 million registered voters.

The plebiscite marked the first time Mrs. Aquino went to the electorate for a show of support since the "people power revolution" swept her to

Black History Month marks 'progression from oppression'

By Kevin Kleinbardt
Campus Correspondent

Black History Month, an 18-year-old observance, was officially kicked off Friday with an opening ceremony at the Benton Museum.

The ceremony also served as an opening for Clemon E. Smith's art exhibit.

Black History Month is a national focus on black culture in America that will feature exhibits, lectures, discussions and music.

Progression from Oppression, this year's theme, is a movement in itself, said Artie Travis, coordinator of the Afro-American Cultural Center. "It is a perpetual thing, and progression will go on as long as oppression will. No one is free if someone is oppressed," he said. The way to overcome oppression, he said, is education.

Travis also said we have to re-aquaint ourselves with the troubles of black people in the United States and realize their history. "Their history is an integral part of American history, and must be recognized as such," he said.

Gov. William O'Neill, in a letter to the Black Student's Association said, "Througout history, Black [black] Americans have contributed their talents, skills, and initiatives to shape our destiny and expand our record of accomplishment. It is therefore most appropriate that all our people learn of these achievements and have

Senior Casteen aide quits after half year

By Paul Parker
Daily Campus Staff

President John Casteen's top aide quit last week after less than six months on the job.

Galvin G. Gall, senior executive assistant to the president, became the first high-level Casteen appointee to leave the university. He was the second administrator to step down within a week and the sixth since Casteen took office in the summer of 1985.

Gall could not be reached Sunday for comment.

His resignation was effective Jan. 31 and had been submitted at least as early as Jan. 15, according to Karen Williams, a university spokeswoman.

Gall wanted more free time, especially for skiing, Williams said.

Gall had retired from university life and came out of retirement to accept his appointment in September. "He really didn't want to go back to all the problems of dealing with the bureaucracy," Williams said.

Reached Sunday night, Casteen said Gall "just decided he was going to go back to retirement." Gall had retired as dean of Extended and Continuing Education shortly before taking the post as Casteen's aide.

Casteen would not comment further on the resignation.

When Gall was appointed, Casteen said it was part of ongoing efforts to improve the effectiveness of university administration.

Gall was assistant provost in the Homer Babbidge administration in 1968.

The first resignation last week was when Athletic Director John L. Toner announced he would be stepping down from that job, but would remain with the university. Toner, whose administration was lambasted last year in a report about UConn athletics, was "reassigned" to direct construction of the university's proposed sports center. Toner's resignation as athletic director coincided with a projected $5 million cost overrun for the center, which is still on the drawing boards, and with two basketball players becoming academically ineligible to play.

Gall and Toner joined Harry Hartley, vice president for finance

Last cooperative market to cease its operations

NEW HAVEN (AP)—The area's only co-operative supermarket will cease operations at the end of the month because of skyrocketing rent.

The board of director of Cooperative Consumers of New Haven voted Friday not to renew the lease for the premises of its remaining store, the Co-Op Supermarket in the Spring Glen section of Hamden, because the rent had quadrupled.

"It's a shame," said James Segaloff, the organization's attourney. "And to say the least, (directors) are very upset about the whole thing. But anybody who loooks at those numbers would know there's no other alternative."

The organization, established in 1937, once had five stores where shoppers were shareholders who had a say in management. The group presently has about 2,300 members listed in its books.

"I feel really sad about it," said Betty MacKinnon, who has been shopping at cooperative stores in Hamden for about 30 years. "I don't know what the senior citizens are going to do."

Robert Angelo of Robert-Lewis Realtors, which manages the property, said the owner of the property could rent the building to retail or office concerns at a much higher rate than the cooperative pays.

Though the store will be closed, members say the group will stay intact. But they said it is unlikely they will set up shop elsewhere, since the group has been unable to find another site that is affordable and suitable.

Congress may request Reagan's personal notes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan keeps personal notes about his activities, but releasing them to congressional committees investigating the Iran arms-Contra controversy may "infringe on the privacy of the president and others," a White House spokesman said Sunday.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, a member of the special Senate panel investigating the controversy, said Sunday the panel had learned about the notes "a few days ago" but not yet decided whether to formally request the documents.

"I certainly think that any relevant information ought to be made available," Mitchell said in a telephone interview. "The president has said repeatedly that he wants all relevant information to be made public."

Asked if Reagan kept such recollections, as reported in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post, White House spokesman Don Mathes said:

"Yes, he does keep notes that he makes from time to time at his residence in the evening. They are personal notes on his private and official activities."

Mathes added, though, that Reagan's notes "would include some of his official activities and indeed there would be something on Iran" in them.

The Senate panel hasn't yet asked for the notes, Mathes said, but "the notes are personal and the White House believes that to release them would infringe on the privacy of the president and others."

But Mitchell said: "It ought to be possible to review these notes in a manner that does not infringe on the president's privacy. Perhaps some third party could review these items and determine if they are relevant."

U.S. reporter detained, accused of espionage

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An American reporter has been detained in Iran, the Swiss Foreign Ministry said Sunday, and hours after his detention the Iranian news agency said a person posing as a journalist had been accused of spying.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA) said Saturday night a "spy of the Zionist regime" had been arrested after entering the country with a false passport and disguised as a journalist. It did not identify the person by name or nationality.

In New York, a spokesman for The Wall Street Journal said a reporter for the newspaper was being held in Iran.

"We have learned through diplomatic channels that Gerald F. Seib, staff reporter for The Wall Street Journal, has been detained in Iran, " Managing Editor Norman Pearlstine said. "Mr. Seib had been invited by the Iranian government to visit Iran along with more than 50 other American and foreign journalist. We have not been informed of any reason for this detention."

"Jerry Seib is a highly respected foreign correspondent and there can be no basis for his detention, " Pearlstine said in a statement.

"We are seeking explanations through Iranian and other diplomatic channels. We hope any confusion will be cleared up and we are requesting his immediate release from detention and from Iran.

"Jerry Seib entered Iran legally on a valid U.S. passport and is obviously a well known and well respected journalist. We see no reason to link Mr. Seib's detention with the Iranian news agency report."

Seib, 30, has been a Journal reporter since 1978, and has covered the Middle East from Cairo since 1985.

Pelto selected to chair Education Committee

By Bill Slocum
Daily Campus Staff

Calling it "the most important post I've held in the legislature", State Representative Jonathan Pelto (D-Mansfield) said yesterday that he was honored to receive appointment to chair the Subcommittee of Higher Education last week.

The subcommittee, which will deal directly with colleges in Connecticut such as UConn, was recently created by the Democrat-controlled legislature. Pelto said that the "mere fact we have a legislature shows our commitment to higher education", noting that such issues were "folded into other committees"when the Republicans controlled the legislature before the last elections.

Pelto, whose 54th District includes UConn, said he wants to "increase money for all of higher education, increase student aid, and support programs that would help higher education."

The latter goal, Pelto said, would include helping develop such programs as ConnTech and "making sure the field house is built." Pelto said he talked extensively with the chairs of the Joint Committee on Education, Representative Naomi Cohen and Senator Kevin Sullivan on these plans.

Official business for the new subcommittee will begin this Friday, when a public hearing will be held at the capital to discuss a $20 million student aid package, which was originally proposed by the Governor's Financial Aid Task Force, then headed by Pelto. Pelto said he considers this proposal "one of my top priorities" and is very optimistic about its passage, although he added that the proposal faces a long process before it may be approved by the legislature.

Pelto said the position "gives me the opportunity" to work for "more grant money, less student reliance on loans, and more support for minorities."

Pelto credited "experience in my district" with "providing that extra push" in getting him the subcommittee chair. He said he felt his new position was more the result of hard work then politics. "My role is to go down there and get things done. [Getting appointed] is a complement not for me, but for those that work hard."

Pelto indicated that UConn would not be his sole priority at the subcommittee. "I want to see my constituency well-represented," he said, "but I have the responsibility to work for all of the schools of the state."

Chinese journalist speaks on Party-controlled coverage

By Dean Orser
Daily Campus Staff

During the past two months, China's Communist Party has orchestrated a crackdown against "bourgeois liberalization" — a term it has used to counteract the recent wave of student protests calling for more participation in elections and greater freedoms. This crackdown has resulted in the ousting of some of the country's most prominent and influential figures in academia and government, the latest being Liu Binyan, a reporter for China's government-controlled newspaper, The People's Daily.

As a lecturer last Friday in the Bishop Center, visiting Chinese journalist and educator Guan Keguang avoided making an in-depth assessment of his government's recent actions. Instead, he held up a two-week old copy of The People's Daily, pointed to the student protest stories on the front page and said to the audience, "things must have already gone too far."

Now in the United States as a columnist for the Cape Cod Times, the 48-year-old Guan at first seemed cautious as to what he could and could not say — possibly from fear of a reprisal upon returning home to Shanghai, where he is deputy director of the journalism program at Shanghai International Studies University.

Guan has already felt the weight of the Party once. He was imprisoned during the Cultural Revolution for "thought crimes" against the government.

Much of Guan's lecture, entitled, "Reading Between the Lines," was devoted to the Chinese newspaper industry. It is an industry that has flourished in the last decade, he said.

"During the Cultural Revolution, in the whole country there were only 66 newspapers. They were all party organs," Guan said. "But now there are a little more than a thousand newspapers."

In all of China, there are 98 papers that come out every day, Guan explained, and another 225 that are printed five or six days a week. Twenty percent of those publications are party organs or government controlled. All others, weekly or biweekly, are special interest newspapers.

"The party has a very tight control over the media," he said. "We are brought up to believe it is a virtue to obey authorities."

Nearly 80 percent of the population in China are peasants, Guan said, and the majority are not educated. That is why Chinese journalism is designed to educate rather than just inform.

"In choosing stories the journalist have to bear in mind whether the stories serve the purpose of educating the people," Guan said. "Even when a negative news story is run it must serve the purpose of educating the people."

According to Guan, the government invests money in newspapers because it is an effective tool to educate the people.

Whereas the news media in the West has several news agencies, Chinese newspapers draw international stories from one major news agency, Xinhua. This news agency employs 8,000 employees in 90 bureaus all over the world. It collects information for China's newspapers and provides the government with news releases.

"Information is processed first for domestic consumption," Guan said, adding, "no newspaper can write their own international news. Xinhua decides what they will run."

appreciation for and understanding of the nature, scope, richness and diversity of Black Culture."

Cassandra Wilson, president of the Black Students Association, stressed the importance of the month's programs. "Be educated, not just entertained," she said. "This month is to draw attention to the otherwise downplayed Black culture," and she emphasized the value of the symposiums, such as Thursday night Brown Bag Rap Sessions.

Javan Collins said these programs should serve to "encourage intermingling with students of all racial backgrounds to bring both sides of the spectrum together and get away from insensitivity." He said we must also stop judging one another by appearences, because "this is not a good way to understand each other." He said , "we should communicate to overcome barriers."

Sean Foster, chairman of the Social Committee for the BSA stressed that although it is called Black History Month, it is not just for black students, but rather for everybody so they can learn and understand black culture. "The more [people that are aware], the better," he said.

Vice president of Student Affairs and Services, Carol Wiggins, proclaimed Black History Month as "a time to reflect, celebrate, and pay tribute. We must remember the past, but look to the future." She said, "We must not regress, but build on the past to make a better future."

Some of this month's highlights include: Oprah Winfrey's lecture, Smith's painting and sculpture exhibit, and many other programs to bring black history to light.

power in February 1986 following contested presidential elections. That uprising forced Marcos to abandon the presidency after 20 years and flee into exile in Hawaii.

Marcos said Sunday in Honolulu that, "I have been informed that massive cheating and fraud has already happened." He claimed lower level government workers had been offered 100 pesos (about $5) each to vote for the document.

The proposed 20,000-word charter was completed in October by a 48-member commission Mrs. Aquino appointed despite opposition from both leftist and rightist critics.

The plebiscite asks voters to respond "yes" or "no" to the question: "Do you vote for the approval of the Constitution of the Republic of the Philippines as proposed by the Constitutional Commission."

The constitution would sharply reduce the power of the president, re-establish a two-chamber legislature, guarantee civil rights and ban the military from political activity other than voting. It would confirm Mrs. Aquino in the presidency for a six-year term.

Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno has said the plebiscite was a "vote of confidence in Corazon Aquino" and an approval margin below 60 percent would spell trouble.

Former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile campaigned against the charter. His Coalition of Democratic Action predicted a 60 percent "no" vote unless the government "rigs the election."

It was unclear what would happen if the proposal is rejected. Mrs. Aquino's opponents say she should then resign and call new elections, but there is no legal requirement to do so.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—James Montgomery Doohan, known to "Star Trek" fans as Scotty, says he hasn't tired of discussing the TV series that has spawned fan conventions and four films, and he has come to accept his role in it.

"Being typecast has helped me to become famous all over the world," said the actor who portrayed Chief Engineer Montgomery Scott in 79 "Star Trek" episodes and four movies based on the TV series.

"As long as there's an autograph to be signed, I want to do it," said Doohan, who was in Indianapolis during the weekend for the Carquest 500 World of Wheels in the Indiana Convention Center.

Doohan says he didn't get into acting "to be...idolized as some kind of personality. I've learned to live with it. As long as I make a living at it, it's OK. Now, it's OK."

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Now that he's starring in the title role of NBC's TV movie "LBJ: The Early Years," Randy Quaid is sorry about some old nightclub routines in which he unflatteringly mimicked the late president.

"I'm kind of embarrassed and ashamed really for the material that I used to do when I would do Johnson," he said.

Lyndon Baines Johnson "is this image in the minds of so many people of being a buffoon. And the way he's been portrayed in other films is caricatured.

"What I tried to do with this part was forget the celebrity aspect of the man and forget that he was president and concentrate on him as I would on any other character."

Golden Globe awards presented Saturday

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—"Platoon," an intense film about the Vietnam War, won Golden Globe awards for best dramatic movie of 1986 and best director at the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's 44th annual awards ceremony.

Golden Globes, which are often regarded as omens of the Oscars, also were presented Saturday night to Marlee Matlin of "Children of a Lesser God" and Bob Hoskins of "Mona Lisa" for dramatic performances in a motion picture.

Woody Allen's"Hannah and Her Sisters" was chosen for best comedy or musical motion picture. Acting honors in the comedy or musical category went to Australia's Paul Hogan for "Crocodile Dundee" and Sissy Spacek for "Crimes of the Heart."

Director Oliver Stone, who spent 10 years trying to film his own experience as a soldier in Vietnam, was surprised by the top dramatic and directing honors that went to "Platoon."

"Through this award you acknowledge the Vietnam veteran and you say you understand what happened over there and that it should not happen again," Stone told the Beverly Hilton Hotel ballroom audience.

"L.A. Law" took top television honors with the Golden Globe for best television drama series.

Miss Matlin, whose hearing is impaired, provided the most dramatic moment of the evening when she claimed the award for her performance as the troubled deaf woman in "Children of a Lesser God."

She accepted it in sign language interpreted by a friend. "I can't believe it! I'm shaking! I'm not much of a speaker—he is," she said referring to the interpreter while receiving appreciative applause.

The Cecil B. DeMille award for career achievment went to Anthony Quinn, who ackowledged 210 films in his 50-year-career and cited his advice to his children: "You can only be as bad as you dare to be good."

Olivia de Havilland was honored for her supporting performance in a television movie for "Anastasia: The Mystery of Anna," Edward Woodlward as lead actor in a television series, "The Equalizer," Angela Lansbury as lead actress in a dramtic series, "Murder, She Wrote," and Loretta Young for best performance by an actress in a TV movie, "Christmas Eve."

James Woods won a Globe for best performance by an actor in a TV movie for his role as a schizophrenic in the CBS film "Promise," which also won as best miniseries or movie made for television.

"Golden Girls" was named best TV musical or comedy series, and "Moonlighting" stars Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd were chosen best actor and actress in that category.

PRESIDENT'S POLICY ON DISCRIMINATORY HARASSMENT

The University of Connecticut's policy is to sustain a positive environment for all members of this community--students, employees, visitors, and others. This policy has been highly publicized in the past. I am reissuing it now to express my personal commitment to maintaining a supportive campus environment.

Discrimination, including discriminatory harassment, is expressly prohibited by this policy. Whether it is directed against individuals or groups, and whether it is consciously malicious or thoughtlessly unkind, such behavior threatens the integrity of our social and intellectual environment. Its underlying motives never excuse the damage it does to its victims' confidence and self-esteem or to the community's values.

All discriminatory harassment is offensive. Some forms, however, still must be singled out so that their nature and prevalence can be understood. Most people recognize the most flagrant acts of sexual harassment--extortion of sexual favors, unwanted physical contact, or romantic overtures that disregard the recipient's preference.

On the other hand, there may be little consensus against other behavior that may have no specific personal victim, yet diminishes human dignity. A display of suggestive calendars, posters, and similar items in an office, for example, may have no intended victim. Yet all people are victimized regardless of their gender, because to display creates an inappropriate environment for work.

Most of us understand and abhor overt racial and religious intolerance. Sadly, understanding a problem does not always solve it. Familiarity can lead to a new language to describe old behavior. Commonplace racial affronts can be attributed to insensitivity rather than to bigotry. By virtue of fundamental commitment to academic feedom, we must be conscious of tendencies toward intolerance and be relentless in resisting them.

Administrators and faculty alike occupy positions of authority and influence over employees and students. They are responsible for maintaining environments free of harassment. We are accountable for our own behavior. We are also responsible for our subordinates in the office and classroom. The failure of managers, supervisors, and others in authority to remedy discriminatory harassment violates this policy just as the original discriminatory act does.

Any person who believes that she or he is being harassed or otherwise subjected to discrimination because of race, ethnicity, religion, sex, physical disability, or other similar characteristics is encouraged to consult the Office for Affirmative Action Programs (OAAP). The OAAP can advise you on options available to victims. It's administers the University's discrimination complaint procedures. Its office is located in Hall Building, 4th Floor, Box U-175, 368 Fairfield Road, Storrs, CT 06268. The telephone number is 486-2943

Deans, Directors, and the Department Heads receiving complaints are to refer the inquirer to the Office for Affirmative Action Programs or seek information on the inquirer's behalf.

Other sources of information include the Women's Center, the Office of the Dean of Students, the Afro-American Cultural Center, the International Center, and the Puerto Rican Center.

Each office and person involved in advising complainants on sources of assistance should avoid comments that might dissuade victims from pursuing their rights or constitute threats of reprisal. Such behavior in itself is discriminatory and is a violation of this policy.

Only the shadow knows:

The 100th, 101th or 102th time for Punxsutawney Phil

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP)—At sunrise today, it will be the 100th, the 101st or the 102nd time that the world's best known groundhog makes his annual fearless forecast of spring.

In Punxsutawney, a western Pennsylvania town of 7,000, these minor details don't really matter to people.

"You don't shoot Santa Claus," said William Null, director of the Punxsutawney Chamber of Commerce. "A lot of this is tongue-in-cheek stuff. It's a myth and we try to promote it. It puts Punxsutawney on the map."

Punxsutawney Phil is supposed to look for his shadow when he is pulled from his electrically heated den into the winter cold and the artificial glare of television lights on Gobbler's Knob outside of town.

But, in reality, the elite Inner Circle of the Groundhog Club is believed to decide the question days before the event.

The question of whether this is the centennial of groundhog predicting in Punxsutawney depends on how you count it.

Null, a member of the 14-man Inner Circle, claimed this is the 100th time. "The Seer of Seers" will emerge from his burrow since, he said, the first forecast was Feb. 2, 1887.

To mark the centennial, the club has planned a four-day weekend bash.

By almost anyone's reckoning, Monday's forecast would be the 101st if the first came in 1887. And if the first forecast was on Feb. 3, 1886, which the club's own handbooks claim, then this year's prognostication would be the 102nd.

Null insists the 1886 forecast was "unofficial," and, by his figuring, Phil has made 99 predictions with Monday's being his 100th.

"Subtract 1887 from 1987 and you get 100," he said. "We've been promoting this as the 100th anniversary for six months. This is the 100th year. He's done it 99 times."

Folklore has it that if the groundhog doesn't see his shadow, spring is just around the corner. If he does see his shadow, it means six more weeks of winter.

Of course, the sun rarely shines into the woods at Gobbler's Knob at dawn in February, but records show Phil has seen his shadow all but eight out of 100, 101 or 102 times.

Null, when not battling reporters, is fighting other "Johnny-come-latelys" who have tried to ride Phil's coattails in order to get "on the map" too.

Those are, to name just a few, Melvin of Greensboro, N.C.; Octorara Orphie of Quarryville, Pa.; Jimmy of Sun Prairie, Wis.; Dave from Dunkirk, N.Y.; Tilly from Tacoma, Wash.; an albino woodchuck from Wiarton, Ontario, called Willie; and the late Millie from West Orange, N.J., who is being replaced by Woodrow K. Woodchuck.

Ohio's answer to Phil, Buckeye Chuck, is expected to pop out of his burrow in Marion, in a wooded lot adjacent to the studio of a radio station.

There's even a rabbit called Fred from Irvinton, Ky., who hops in circles around a special "weather tree."

Chinese Bookplates on exhibit at Library

An exhibit of modern Chinese Bookplates will be on display until February 27 at the library. The exhibit by contemporary Chinese artists makes a colorful and exuberant display of modern Chinese art which contrasts sharply with the restrained and sedate scroll paintings most often thought of as "Chinese" art. Using pandas, water buffalo, and other local sights as their themes, the artists have created these small "jewel prints" as they are called through multiple layers of wood-block printing and have shown a bold riot of color and originality.

UConn students enjoy some of the paintings by Clemon Elijah Smith, currently on display at the Library, along with Chinese Bookplates and Kenneth Hanson's Landscapes. (Stephanie Rob photo)

The bookplate, known in the West since the 15th century, has been used in China only since the 1930's when it was introduced into China by Li Hua. Previously, owners and collectors of books used the familiar seal, stamped in red directly into the book. The seal has remained incorporated in some of the modern examples in the exhibit.

The exhibit has been made possible through the generosity of the Ex Libris Research Society of Peking, which has loaned more than 300 examples of bookplates.

On Wednesday, February 11th, Professor Hui-Ming Wang of the University of Massachusetts will present a slide lecture, "From Seal Carving to Contemporary Chinese Ex Libris," at 1:30 p.m. in the Homer Babbidge Library.

Dazzling Dreamgirls take show on the road

Dreamgirls, the dazzling Broadway musical that won six 1982 Tony Awards and 2 Grammy Awards, comes to the Paramount Theatre in Springfield for a limited three-performance engagement on March 28 and 29. The production is part of the Dreamgirls ' international tour. Tickets for the show are on sale now.

Dreamgirls tells the story of the black music movement in the late 1960's and 1970's, when the effort to "cross over" into the white world of popular music was finally achieved. It focuses on three young girls from Chicago, who start as back-up singers for a rhythm and blues star, end up as superstars (The Dreams), and come face to face with the consequences of success.

Dreamgirls has a book and lyrics by Tom Eyen, music by Henry Krieger, set designs by Robin Wagner, lighting by Tharon Musser, and costumes by Theoni V. Aldredge. The play is directed and choreographed by the legendary Michael Bennett, creator of A Chorus Line. When the play opened in New York to rave reviews, Frank Rich of The New York Times wrote: "When Broadway history is being made, you can feel it. What you feel is a seismic emotional jolt that sends the audience as one, right out of its wits. Broadway history was made the night Michael Bennett's beautiful and heartbreaking musical Dreamgirls opened in New York." More recently, the show continues to receive rave reviews on its international tour.

Athletic facilites affect students and athletes

It is time the state legislature realized that new athletic facilities are one of UConn's most pressing needs. The current field house is in an advanced state of disrepair and it is high time construction got under way.

However, the proposed sports center received a serious blow last week when the state Bureau of Public Works announced it would have to seek an additional $5 million because of cost overruns. Some members of the legislature are upset with the prospect of having to allocate more money and, in some cases, have questioned the need for the building.

The most disturbing comments came from state rep. Ronald Smoko (D-Hamden). Smoko, who is co-chairman of the Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee, said that before any money is allocated, the university must give a firm word on its intention to stay in the Big East Conference. He added that the legislature needs to know if, in view of the problems the basketball team has been facing lately, UConn intends to compete in major inter-collegiate sports.

However, the question Mr. Smoko should be asking is not whether the university plans to retain its membership in the Big East. Rather, legislators should be asking whether the school needs new athletic facilites, regardless of conference affiliation.

Even in the unlikely event UConn does leave the Big East, the fact is that the basketball team would still need a new arena and students need adequate recreational facilites. The current 4,600 seat field house is inadequate for any type of varsity athletics, let alone Big East competition. The proposed 8,000 seat arena is necessary to properly accomodate the number of fans who regularly attend basketball games.

It is highly unlikely UConn would do something as foolish as drop out of the Big East. The national exposure is greater than any other university department or program could possibly provide. But to assure that this publicity is only positive, the legislature must provide the best possible athletic facilites for both students and athletes.

If the money for the sports center is not provided, the already troubled athletic department would continue on its downward spin. The legislature must act to assure that this does not occur.

America's Cup not just a race

It all started about a week ago.

Bill, my next door neighbor, started acting a little strange. He'd always done some pretty irrational things (he voted for Mondale), but he'd always done it under control. Until now.

He began to skip work, and during the afternoons he would paint his house. Now, if painting a house in the dead of winter seems strange to you, further consider that he painted the upper part of the house red and the lower portion blue, with the porch railings and windowsills remaining white.

Every day around dinnertime, he'd leave for an hour, dressed completely in white, and come back with giant bags of pretzels and cases of Budweiser. Then he'd go up on the roof with a bag, firmly affix his feet on each slope, and launch cans of Foster's Lager into the street.

Loud noises would come from his house around midnight, and the light in the living room would regularly stay on until dawn. Yesterday, I saw Bill walking out to his mail box for the first time in a week, and I decided to talk with him.

"How's it going, Bill," I asked, a little hestitant of what I might hear.

"Great, just great. We're winning, and that's all that counts," answered Bill.

"We're winning what."

"Hahahaha, that's pretty funny Orzulak. You're a pretty funny guy. Winning what? Hahahahaha. Say, want a beer."

"Sure."

"Come on in."

Stepping over the wet paint, I walked into the house. Wading through a sea of empty beer cans, I followed Bill into the kitchen.

"Bill, are all these cans leftovers from the Super Bowl?"

"No."

"The Celtics game? The UConn-Pittsburgh basketball game? Oh, I know, it's from the Whalers game, right?"

"Hell no. The America's Cup."

"Oh, you mean the boat race?"

Bill was angry.

"It's not just a boat race. It's war. It's us against them, American superiority against the world. If Stars and Stripes wins, we're the best and Dennis Conner is God."

"But what if we lose?"

"We won't lose. We can't lose. We're America."

"But we lost last time."

"Don't you read the newspapers. We can't lose. Dennis Conner is the most experienced 12-meter skipper in the world, and the Stars and Stripes crew is often flawless. The Sail America design team installed a new rudder to optimize tacking and made small keel alterations to increase maneuverability. The main sail has a revolutionary cross-weave made of spectra yarn on the horizontal and Kevlar fiber on the vertical. And the gunsmoke blue hull minimizes wave-making drag and increases upwind speed."

"I didn't know you knew so much about sailing."

"Everybody knows about sailing. It's trendy, a cool thing to talk about at parties."

"Let me get this straight. For 132 consecutive years, the United States maintained the America's Cup without much attention or fanfare. But because we lost to Australia in 1983, we now have to endure five race stories a day in every newspaper, feature race stories on every television broadcast and 'Walter Cronkite's American Cup Minute' during prime time programming every day until the race is over, not to mention the six hours of live coverage every night on ESPN beginning at 11 p.m.?"

"That's right."

"So I suppose that sailing is your favorite sport now."

"Hell, no. I don't even like sailing. Don't you understand? It's not the boat that's sailing out on the ocean, it's America. It might as well be a bobsled for all I care. I just want the world to see that America is the best, no matter what it is. That's all that counts. And you know something?"

"What's that?"

"I haven't had this much fun since the 1984 Olympics."

Obligatory living is a waste of time

Some people live in the present. Some live in the past. Some even live in the future.

I live in the obligatory.

I spend most of my conscious hours thinking about what I should, or shouldn't, be doing instead of whatever it is I am doing.

In the morning, when I wake up, the first thing I do is tell myself I should have got up earlier. Why? Because I should exercise before breakfast because it's the cornerstone of a healthy diet. I should eat a healthy diet because I should lose 15 pounds, maybe 20.

When I do eat breakfast it's always something I shouldn't have. "I shouldn't be eating this," I tell myself, biting into a bagel. I used to spend a lot of mornings eating doughnuts and telling myself I shouldn't until I realized that not only shouldn't I eat doughnuts, I shouldn't even think about eating them.

Then I go root around in the closet for something to wear. I am one of those people who go through life looking as though she's wearing somebody else's clothes. I should buy something that fits, I tell myself. I should have ironed something to wear. I should take all this stuff lying around on the floor to the dry cleaner. I should clean out my closet. I should clean the bedroom. I should clean the whole house.

At work I'm confronted with piles of things I should do. I should answer this mail. I should return these telephone calls. I should read all this stuff that's been piling up on my desk since the last time I cleaned it. Which reminds me. I should clean off my desk.

I start to work. I tell myself I shouldn't be writing this. I should have come up with a better idea. I should be writing something else, something intelligent and sensitive, something warm and witty and wise and wonderful, something that would be all the things I should be but I'm not.

I should be writing something positive and uplifting. I met a woman at a party not long ago who told me, "You should be using your forum for something constructive."

My forum? I should have said something to her but I didn't. I just stood there with my mouth hanging open thinking, "I should say something to her." Later I thought of lots of things I could have said, but probably shouldn't have.

I should stop driving myself crazy thinking about what I should and shouldn't do. I should do something, anything, instead of think about what I should be doing instead.

But I can't seem to. I crawl off to bed each night weighed down by my burden of shoulds and shouldn'ts. I lie there and try to think objectively about my life. It's a pretty good life. I should be really happy, I say to myself as I turn out the light. But I'm not, really. How come?

The answer, I suppose, should be obvious.

Big Macs aren't the specialty of this drive-through service

The Junior Funeral Home in Pensacola, Fla., has added a unique feature to its list of services: a drive-through viewing window designed to make it possible for mourners to see the body of a deceased person without leaving their cars.

"It's just like driving up to a bank teller's window," said Ivy Abanathy, an employee of the funeral home. "The viewing window is built into one of our outside walls. The deceased is placed on a platform that holds the casketat an angle. You drive up and you look at the departed person in the casket."

The idea for this came from the owner of the funeral home, Willie Junior.

"For as long as there have been funeral homes, people have come to funeral homes for two reasons," Junior said. "The first reason is a wake. The second reason is the funeral itself. By installing the drive-through viewing window, I have come up with a third reason for people to come to the funeral home. They come by just to see who's in the window."

Junior said the drive-through viewing window was installed last July, but so far only "several" families of deceased persons have chosen to have their loved ones' bodies displayed in the window.

"Our funeral home is open until 8 p.m.," he said.

"During the hours we are open, the body is displayed inside the funeral home. But if a family chooses the option of having the body displayed after hours, that is when the body will go in the viewing window."

He said the funeral home makes mention of this in death notices it places in the local newspaper. "We will say, 'Visitation from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.. Drive-through viewing from 8:30 p.m. until midnight.'"

The first time the drive-through window was used for viewing, Junior said, approximately 50 motorists came to the funeral home to take a look. "At times the cars were lined up behind each other," he said.

He emphasized, however, that there was no honking. "The people in the cars showed great respect for the deceased," he said.

One potential problem is that, the way the Junior Funeral Home is constructed, the viewing window is built into a wall on the passenger side of the cars that drive through the viewing lane. Thus, when a motorist pulls up to the window, he or she has to look across the front seat to see the body in the window.

"That's really nothing to worry about," Junior said.

"You can just slide across the front seat to get a better view."

One of the features of the viewing window is a metal drawer that slides out from the wall, just like the drawers that drive-through tellers at banks use.

"We have a guest book in the drawer," Junior said. "So you can reach out the window of your car and sign the guest book. Both the guest book and the pen are bolted down, so no one can steal them from the drawer."

In addition, he said, mourners may place sympathy cards in the drawer. When they slide the drawer back in, the sympathy cards drop into the viewing room.

"The cards do not drop onto the body of the deceased," Junior said. "They drop onto the floor of the room."

The average mourner, he said, spends between three and five minutes parked next to the viewing window. "Some people keep their motors running; some turn their motors off. It is entirely up to the individual."

He said he expects use of the window to increase as people become more accustomed to the idea. One of the things he has going for him, he said, is location.

"We're on a busy street," Junior said. "We're right down the street from the Civic Arena. The Hilton Hotel is about four blocks away. If people are on their way to the Civic Arena, they can drive through our viewing lane to see if anyone's in the window. As a matter of fact, some people drive through even when there's no one in the window. They just want to see what the window looks like."

What the motorists see, he said, is a small room "with lights positioned to give the deceased a natural glow. We also have a spotlight on the outside of the building to provide exterior lighting. The viewing window itself is made of double-strength security glass. At night you get ablsolutely no glare off the glass."

Junior said the community reaction has been generally positive.

"The word is spreading," he said. "Just today, a woman said to me, 'Mr. Junior, I'd like to have my nephew placed in the window.' The woman brought it up on her own. There is absolutely no hard sell."

The event is co-sponsored by Trinity College, Real Art Ways, and The Matrix Gallery of The Wadsworth Atheneum.

Monk, a composer, director, choreographer, singer, and filmmaker, is considered to be on the cutting edge of performance art, and since 1984 has created more than 50 music/theater/dance and film works. She has received numerous awards, including two Guggenheim Fellowships; three Obies; the 1986 National Music Theater Award; and 15 Awards for Musical Composition from the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers. She is founder of The House, a company dedicated to an interdisciplinary approach to performance.

Tilles studied piano and chamber music at The Julliard School and Oberlin Conservatory and has performed around the world. She has been a member of Steve Reich & Musicians and The New Mallard Band, and has worked with Laura Dean Dancers and Musicians, and with composer Richard Munson.

New Music Weekend will open with a concert of musical compositions by Monk, performed by the composer and Tilles at 8 p.m. on February 6 in the J.L. Goodwin Theatre of the Austin Arts Center at Trinity. Featured will be "Songs from the Hill", composed in 1977 for unaccompanied voice, and "Natural Attractions", seven pieces for voice and two pianos. Following the performance there will be a reception in the Widener Gallery.

At 2 p.m. on February 7, Monk will present a lecture/demonstration in the Atheneum's Avery Gallery. A reception will follow in The Avery Court and Matrix Gallery.

The final activities of the weekend will be masters classes by the two artists. Tilles will present "Music and Rhythm" from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at The School of the Hartford Ballet from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. in the Real Art Ways Performance Space, with a reception to follow in the gallery.

From now until February 22, Monk's work can be seen in New Performance on Video, an exhibition in Trinity's Widener Gallery. The exhibition, open from 1-5 p.m. weekdays, features the work of 35 contemporary artists and groups of artists who have experiemented with, and streetched the form and content of, dance, theater, and music as they are traditionally defined. Trinity Artist-in-Residence Lenora Champagne, whose work is included in the exhibition, will present a gallery talk on February 5 at 4 p.m. Admission to the exhibition and the talk show is free.

Monk's Ellis Island, a half-hour film that explores the immigrant experience will be shown at Real Art Ways February 2-6 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. continuously. Admission is free.

General admission to the February 6 concert is $8; to the February 7 lecture/demonstration, $5; and to each February 8 master class, $10. Reduced rates are available to students, senior citizens, and those interested in attending more than one event.

Partial funding of New Music Weekend is provided by a grant from the Connecticut Commission on the Arts and The National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency, through the New England Foundation on the Arts.

For tickets and information, call the Trinity Box Office at 1-527-8062.

Red Grooms raises Ruckus with new Benton exhibit

Fran Tarkenton will be there. Gertrude Stein plans to attend. Fats Domino and Chuck Berry wouldn't miss it for the world. So, stop by UConn's William Benton Museum of Art Tuesday night for a Red Hot Ruckus - and don't forget to wear your red, 'cause it's gonna be a hot one.

Show up with red hair, and you get in free.

Red Grooms has come to town - at least his art has - and The Benton is throwing a party to celebrate the color red and this mad-capped, red-headed man of vision. What else but a Red Hot Ruckus for the fun-loving art school dropout known as Ruckus Red, who breaks the solemn barriers of art tradition and makes people everywhere laugh out loud? He makes art that's cartoony and fun, and it's made him a superstar of art.

That's the essence of Red Grooms: fun, good humor, and warmth. Something we all need right about now. The Red Hot Ruckus happens this Tuesday night (Feb. 3) from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. Come in any time and walk through the works: an 8-foot-tall, stuffed Tarkenton, a free-standing, free-wheeling Fats Domino, and a couple of works that are naughtier than nice.

Get a sneak preview of some of Red's far-out, award-winning Ruckus Films, all of which are quick, comic, and zany. One of the first to integrate animation and live-action, Red makes magic on the screen.

Groove to the beat of Fats Domino, Chuck Berry, and other great musicians who turned on Red Grooms and his friends in the 50's.

Indulge in several kinds of tasty red desserts and sample our primo "Red Power Punch" (for beer, bring positive I.D., please). Just try not to enjoy yourself!

In other words, you don't have to be a stiff to enjoy Red Grooms' exhibit. As a matter of fact, the Benton wants you to kick off your shoes. Play Lotto Red and Seeing Red for prizes usually sold in the Museum Shop for hard-earned student dollars. At least four lucky people will get to take home Groomsian prizes (One's a London bus, complete with passengers like the punk in the upper deck who's aiming to hang out on the King's Road in Chelsea).

Tickets are available now at The Benton Museum, or call 486-4520 to reserve. Space is limited. Tickets for students are $2. Redheads are admitted free.

Notre Dame rallies, defeats top-ranked North Carolina

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — David Rivers scored all of his 14 points in the second half, including a field goal and two free throws in the final minute, as Notre Dame upset top-ranked North Carolina 60-58 Sunday, the fifth time in 13 years the Fighting Irish have beaten a No. 1 team at home.

Two free throws in the closing seconds by Gary Voce, who led the Irish with 15 points, sealed the victory as Notre Dame rallied from a 16-point deficit at the Athletic Convocation Center to snap the Tar Heels' 16-game winning streak.

Rivers, playing in foul trouble much of the second half, scored eight of his points after picking up his fourth foul. North Carolina, 18-2, played without its leading scorer, Kenny Smith, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Saturday and is expected to miss two weeks.

Notre Dame, 12-5, used some sharp free throw shooting in the closing minutes.

Voce made two foul shots with 2:49 to play, followed by two more from Donald Royal 30 seconds later to bring the Irish within 53-52.

North Carolina's Joe Wolf, who scored 14 points, answered with a field goal at 1:54, then fouled Voce as he again scored 18 seconds later. Voce missed the free throw for the three-point play, but a North Carolina player tipped the ball out of bounds and Rivers followed with his jumper with 1:06 to go, giving the Irish their first lead since early in the first half.

North Carolina's J.R. Reid, who finished with 12 points, drove under the basket and missed with 20 seconds left and Rivers made two free throws four seconds later for a 58-55 lead.

Thirteen seconds later, North Carolina's Jeff Lebo, who scored 11 points, missed a three-point shot.

Reid fouled Voce on a rebound in the Irish's next posession, and the Notre Dame crowd exploded, tossing scores on placards on the floor as Notre Dame was assessed a technical foul.

Voce made both free throws and Lebo made the technical. North Carolina had posession of the ball but Wolf missed a three-point shot in the closing seconds and Lebo followed with the rebound for the final margin.

Ranzino Smith scored eight points in his starting role in place of Kenny Smith, who was released from the North Carolina infirmary Sunday.

One week after Super Bowl, Elway throws winning TD

HONOLULU (AP) — John Elway threw for the game's only touchdown, and Denver Broncos teammate Karl Mecklenburg spearheaded a smothering defense to lead the AFC to a 10-6 victory over the NFC in Sunday's Pro Bowl football game.

Elway, who threw for 304 yards in the Broncos' 39-20 Super Bowl loss to the New York Giants the previous Sunday, put the AFC ahead to stay with a 10-yard touchdown pass to Todd Christensen of the Los Angeles Raiders on the final play of the first quarter.

That touchdown — and a 26-yard field goal by New England's Tony Franklin just before halftime — were set up when the NFC's return specialist, rookie Vai Sikahema of St. Louis, fumbled the ball away on punt returns.

The victory halted, at least temporarily, the NFC's domination of the AFC in recent postseason play. The National Conference had won five of the last seven NFL all-star games and five of the last six Super Bowls, the last three by wide margins.

The AFC reduced the NFC's lead in the Pro Bowl series to 10-7.

Seattle's Fredd Young recovered the first fumble by Sikahema, who had turned the ball over just twice during the regular season, at the NFC 17 to set up the touchdown.

Miami rookie linebacker John Offerdahl fell on the second Sikahema fumble at the AFC 44, setting up Franklin's field goal and a 10-0 lead.

The NFC was limited to a field goal of 38 yards by Morten Andersen in the third quarter and a 19-yarder by the New Orleans kicker in the opening seconds of the final period.

Defensive end Reggie White of Philadelphia was a standout for the NFC, logging a Pro Bowl record-tying four sacks. Although on the losing team, he was voted the game's most valuable player.

The AFC came through with a couple of late goal line stands to make the 10 points stand up.

Top scorers for the Lady Panthers were forward Sally Sheerer and freshman Jen Shingler, who notched 15 points apiece.

Miller takes National Pro-Am with final-round 66

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller, the Golden Boy of another golfing era, rolled back the years with a come-from-behind 66 that brought him a one-stroke victory Sunday over Payne Stewart in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

"It's been a long time since I was able to come down the last fairway in contention," said Miller, 39, whose last previous triumph came in the 1983 Inverrary Classic.

"This is my favorite place to play golf in the whole world, and my favorite course," he said of the picturesque Pebble Beach golf links that stretch 6,799 yards along the cliffs and crags of Carmel Bay.

"To be able to get in contention, then make that putt on 18, it's a great thrill for me, a dream come true," said Miller, who came from five shots off the pace in the brilliant, warm sunshine that bathed the Monterey Peninsula.

The 23rd victory of his career came on a 278 total, 10 under par, and was worth $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000.

For Stewart it was a second consecutive runner-up finish in this tournament and another chapter of what might have been in his dreary, discouraging saga.

Stewart led the PGA Tour in top-10 finishes last year with 16. He was second in three tournaments. He won $535,389.

But he did not win a tournament. He has not won since 1983.

The third-round leader here, he stood alone at one point on the back nine.

But Miller, playing well in front of him, moved into a tie for the lead with a 15-18 foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole. And Stewart surrendered his share of the top when he bogeyed the 17th from the back bunker.

He finished with a par 72 and 279 total.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Lanny Wadkins, each very much in the hunt at one time or another, were another shot back at 280. Each had a closing 71.

Fred Couples, with Kansas City Royals third baseman George Brett playing as his amateur partner, was alone at 281 after a 69.

The group at 282 included PGA champion Bob Tway, Dan Pohl, Larry Mize and Danny Edwards. Pohl and Tway each shot 67 in the near-ideal playing conditions, Mize had a 69 and Edwards 71.

Masters champion Jack Nicklaus and Fuzzy Zoeller had identical 71-285 scores. Tom Watson was 74-291 and British Open title-holder Greg Norman was far back at 75-293.

Langer had a share of the lead at the turn, but backed off with consecutive bogeys on the 13th and 14th.

Wadkins closed to within one shot with an 18-foot birdie putt on the 16th. He had a chance to tie from about the same distance on the 17th, but he 3-putted for bogey instead, falling two behind.

Miller, who won this tournament when it was known as "the Crosby Clambake" in his glory year of 1974, got to within one shot of the lead with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 15th.

He gained a share of the top spot with the critical putt on the 18th, then sat patiently waiting by the green while Stewart bogeyed the 17th, missing a 6-foot putt that gave Miller the title.

performances in the 55 meters and 200 meters in recent meets.

Before the Big East, UConn travels to New Haven on Saturday Connecticut Intercollegiate Indoor Championships at Yale University.

Although more than half of her team is comprised of underclassmen, Barnhill, in addition to a high placing in the Big East, has high hopes for a top two finish at the New England Championships and said "I'd like to see one or two performers at the NCAA meet, Mary Kennen has a real good shot at that." Of her team Barnhill said "They work hard, they are east to work with, I have no prima donas here, it is a good group."

Whalers win

PITTSBURGH — John Anderson, Dave Tippett and Scott Kleinendorst scored in the final 2:41 Sunday night as the Hartford Whalers rallied to beat the Pittsburgh Penguins 8-6 and climb back into first place in the NHL's Adams Division.

The victory lifted the Whalers one point ahead of idle Montreal for the division lead.

Track team has big weekend

Husky relay team wins mile at Millrose Games

By Chris Parkin
Daily Campus Staff

The men's track team was very successful this past weekend. Led by freshman Mark Alleyne and a record-setting relay team, they turned in impressive performances at both the Brown Relays and the prestgious Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden in New York.

The highlights of the weekend were when UConn won the 4x400-meter relay at the Millrose Games, and when the Huskies set a school record time Sunday.

At the Brown Relays, held Sunday in Providence, R.I., the Husky 220-meter relay team of senior Daryl Aiken, sophomore Bill Oliverson , freshman Tony Nelson and senior Tim Corbitt won the event in a school record time of 31.3 seconds.

On Friday evening, Oliverson was a member of the Huskies' 4x400 meter (mile) relay foursome which claimed first-place honors at the Millrose Games.

Coach Bill Kelleher called the win "encouraging because we were running on a different type of track than what we're used to."

Oliverson along with senior Mike Christie and fellow sophomores Rohan Freeman and Floyd Redfield won the John G. Anderson Trophy in the college division mile run with a time of 3:22.16.

Kelleher said "We've run faster... I'm very pleased with the way we performed."

UConn edged out Georgia (3:23.45), Maryland (3:25.15), and Mount St. Mary's (3:25.86) for top honors.

Additionally at the Brown Relays, Alleyne, set a Brown Field House record in the triple jump with a first place leap of 49'1". He also placed second in the long jump (22'2").

The Huskies' 4x800 relay team of Mike Baxer, John McGowan, Tim Nash and Bob Steers were second in 7:57.2, while senior Pat Rubega placed fourth in the pole vault with a 14'0" effort.

The team will be back in action next Saturday at the Connecteut Intercollegiate Indoor Championships at Yale University in New Haven.

Women's track coach optimistic

By Lee Condon
Daily Campus Staff

Women's track coach Roseann Barnhill is eagerly awaiting the Big East Conference Championships to be held February 20 at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, New York. The first-year coach would like to see this year's young team place in the top three.

Last season the team captured the Big East Conference Outdoor title, and placed second in indoor competition. Defending the conference title "puts a lot of pressure on the team," said Barnhill. She said "the veteran team members will do well. There is a lot of pressure on the freshmen and sophomores to perform well, and their success depends on how well they adapt to hard work."

This year's team is captained by Senior Mary Kennen (hurdles, jumps, javelin, and pentathlon), senior MaryPat Murphy (throws, weights) and Junior Kim Hawkes (distance).

The versatile Kennen holds school records in the indoor and outdoor high jump and in the UConn fieldhouse pentathlon. She has been an All-Big East selection six times. In addition to returning to the Big East and New England Championships this spring to defend titles in the javelin, pentathlon, and high jump, Kennen is just 1 1/4 inches off qualifying for the NCAA Division 1 National Championships in the high jump.

Although Cross Country standout Hawkes has experienced setbacks this season due to illness, "she has been a consistent performer," said Barnhill. Hawkes has won All-Big East honors in 1985 and 1986 in distance running events, and holds two school records.

Murphy has been an All-Big East selection three times. Sophomore April Davis holds three school records and was All-New England in the 55-meter hurdles and All-Big East in the hurdles and the triple jump. Barnhill said "April should see more improvement as the Big East meet approaches."

Sophomore Barbara Jackson had a second-place finish in a recent meet against Dartmouth and will be a contender on the Big East meet defending her 1986 first-place finish in the shot-put. Sophomore Nicki Leger of placed third in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.58 seconds against Boston University on Sunday. Joelle Normandin of placed third in the 200-meter dash (26.7 seconds) in Boston.

Barnhill also cited junior Olivia Harriot for her recent efforts in the 500 meters and the long jump and senior Ethaline Williams for her
